GOOD DRIVERS NEEDED TO OFFSET TRAVEL HAZARDS

When road and weather conditions are bad, the driver himself must be good to compensate for the extra hazards, motorists were warned by Col. Francis J. McCabe, Chief, Maine State Police.

"The two major factors to be dealt with at this time of year are inadequate traction and reduced visibility," McCabe said.

"These twin troublemakers test a driver's skill and patience to the utmost, but the driver who is determined to come through his winter driving tests with a record of no failures can do so," he emphasized. "Winter driving demands much more attention than driving at any other season," he added, "because changes in the weather and on the roadways are so frequent and so drastic."

He pointed out that a driver may start for work in the morning with streets and highways clear; but by noon it may be snowing; and by evening the going may be rugged. In the event of a freezing rain, stretches of icy pavement can become very treacherous. Glare ice is twice as slippery when temperatures near the thawing point as it is at zero.

"When a motorist skids," continued Chief McCabe, "it is an indication that he is driving too fast for conditions. Tests have shown that it takes three to twelve times as far to stop on snow and ice as on dry concrete. Tire chains cut that distance by about fifty percent, but even then the driver must pay sharp attention to his handling of the wheel."

"Care of windshield is of utmost importance," he emphasized. "When snow and ice have encrusted the windshield of a parked car, the driver should not move it one inch until after the glass has been cleared. You must see danger to avoid it, and you can't see through ice and snow."

G. O. C. COMMITTEE ON LITTLE LEAGUE BASEBALL MEETS

At the last Chamber of Commerce meeting a committee was appointed to investigate the possibilities of forming a Little League Baseball Club for boys 9-12 years of age inclusive.

This committee met Monday evening at the Crescent Park School and discussed the subject thoroughly. Those present were E. Linwood Brown, Donald Christie, Ralph Young, John Howe, Tom Brown, Charles Pendleton and Addison Saunders. The committee elected the following officers: Ralph Young, chairman; John Howe, secretary; Addison Saunders, publicity.

It was decided to suggest to the Chamber of Commerce that we have two teams this summer to get the boys started. But that they did not think it advisable to associate with the National Association of Little Leagues until next year.

The reason being that a year was necessary to start a team, outfit it properly and to get sufficient backing and sponsors from other organizations in town.

The season starts after school stops and continues until the latter part of August.

The committee felt that this project would be of great benefit to the children of the town. It develops sportsmanship, the chance to work with other boys and to be guided and supervised by responsible people such as managers, coaches, etc.

A film, "Little League Basics," will be shown at Crescent Park School, Friday, March 27. It will be shown in the afternoon for the boys at school and at 7:30 in the evening when parents, children and anyone interested in Little League Baseball, are cordially invited.

At the next meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, the committee will make these recommendations above and all persons interested will be welcome at that meeting.

PROGRESS GREAT IN PAST 25 YEARS FOR CARE OF CRIPPLED

More progress in the care and treatment of the crippled has been made in the past quarter century than during the whole previous history of mankind. Mrs. William P. Viles, president of the Pine Tree Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Inc., said today.

"Progress made in the care and treatment of cripples is more spectacular than in any other single field of activity it has been accomplished by a revolutionary change in the attitude of the people toward the crippled and has created a new atmosphere of acceptance for the person who must walk with braces or crutches."

Mrs. Viles said that today proper care and treatment makes it possible for a crippled child to have a happier life and to achieve independence. It enables that child to grow up and, as an adult, to assume his place in our society as a self-sustaining and contributing citizen. Thus, he becomes a productive instead of a dependent person.

"The gradual increase in the number of crippled persons being treated is directly responsible to growing public support of the annual Easter Seal campaign," Mrs. Viles pointed out. "Because of the efforts of the more than 2,000 Easter Seal Societies affiliated with the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults, as is the Pine Tree Society, this growth has been possible."

The 1953 Easter Seal campaign nationwide is scheduled March 5 to Easter Sunday, April 5.

P. T. A. Votes To Sponsor Basketball

The Bethel Parent Teacher Association met Wednesday evening, March 18, at East Bethel Grange Hall. The meeting was opened by Vice-President Freeman and it was reported that $100.83 is in the treasury.

Mr. Freeman discussed the plans of a musical comedy, "Flying Moon," which the P. T. A. is putting on instead of the annual Spring Frolic. This is similar to the old Chautauqua, with all local talent coached by a director from New York.

John Howe, of the School Committee, discussed changing our school schedule to the seven week plan—six weeks of school and one of vacation, a plan used in many places in Maine. The advantages of this plan were spoken of and all members at this meeting were in favor of it.

He also said that anyone is welcome to bring up any subject pertaining to school, or sit in on the School Committee meetings. It was voted to sponsor the grammar school basketball team starting this year, paying rental on the gymnasium and transportation of the team for out-of-town games and on call for other expenses.

Mr. Chapman spoke briefly about his basketball team and the good work they are doing. The attendance banner was won by Junior Primary.

John Howe introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Marcuse, music supervisor in our schools. He gave a very interesting talk on teaching music to children, bringing out the advantages of going slow and being thorough.

Work is under way on a Spring Concert, featuring voices and a band. The lack of school owned instruments was brought out again and there was a discussion regarding the possibility of using instruments used by the late Bethel Band. The need of a "maintenance fund" for keeping horns in repair, also band uniforms, was recommended.

Refreshments were served by the third grade mothers.

Mrs. Norris Brown is attending the Boston Flower Show.

TODAY'S meditation

The Upper Room
THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

Thursday, March 19
Will ye also be his disciples? (John 9:27.) Read John 9:24-28.
JESUS had opened the eyes of a man who had been born blind. Then people with little religious experience asked the Jesus one many questions. They asked him again and again. Bewildered, perhaps even vexed, he finally said to them, "I have told you already, and ye did not hear; wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye also be his disciples?"

Thus this friend of Jesus witnessed to the fact that he was Jesus' disciple. He was doubtful of the sincerity of his questioners, but he was nevertheless convinced that the Son of God had healed him.

Has the change wrought in our lives caused others to question us not for the purpose of scoring us but in order to set themselves on the way of true discipleship? Questions asked us concerning our faith and experience mean opportunities to witness to Christ and to His transforming grace and power. Such questions serve to enrich our own discipleship, in addition to offering opportunity to invite others to know Him better.

Father, we pray that the change wrought in us may cause men to raise questions about sin and the transforming power of our Saviour Jesus Christ. Help us to be true, faithful witnesses for Thee. In Christ's name we pray. Amen.

In the Shadow of the Cross
Lesson for March 22: Matthew 26:6-13; 26:30
Golden Text: John 10:17-18

The anointing with precious ointment brought sharp contrasts between the disciples and the woman who came with the alabaster box of ointment very costly. The disciples even reached the point of indignation that the woman had anointed the Master instead of turning the ointment into cash. One gospel tells us that it was Judas who voiced this indignation because he was a thief and held the bag. He did not want to see money wasted, as he deemed it, by pouring the ointment upon the Master's head.

We may well believe that, long before the day of savings banks and high-pressure advertisements to induce people to invest in one and use it, the woman had learned how to save. It is likely that she saved with her act of adoration in view—saved until the great hour when she could anoint her Master's head.

The night before the crucifixion, as Jesus and his disciples were preparing to leave the upper room in Jerusalem, the Lord instituted the Sacrament of His Supper that, henceforth, men might have a ceremonial designed to help them remember him. It also brings an opportunity to men to declare their faith and show their discipleship to the world.

Let gratitude grow in the heart for the blessed hours that closely preceded the crucifixion. And let us all resolve that in all we do and say we shall be remembering Jesus in the way we live.

"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLDTIMERS

From Ester Anderson, 523 Lebanon Street, Mesa, Arizona: I remember when grandmother cut a ring around her maple tree in Indiana, put a sap in the tree, caught the sap in a bucket, then belled down the sap into maple syrup and maple sugar for us, the grandchildren.

From Claud L. Gourley, Weaverly, Trinity County, California: I remember when combined harvesters were pulled by 32 mules or horses to harvest wheat and barley in California. The animals were guided by a single line attached to the bit of the near leader and was drawn as a jerk line.

From H. J. Scott, Manchester, Ohio: I remember when the streets of Manchester were so full of chuck holes and rough that it was almost an impossible thing to stay in the back. A hack was a closed wagon drawn by two horses. It went out and picked up people and took them to trains or boats. Met them and took them home or where they wanted to go much like the taxi of today. I also remember when people had large fire places and carried in logs and put the ends in the fire. The logs extended out into the room. As the logs burned they were pushed further into the fire. The people sat on each side of the logs. And I remember the old-fashioned steam engine thrashing machine. When they left one farm they blew the whistle which was so loud neighbors for miles around could hear it and know when they were moving on to the next thrashing job. The machines were so heavy the bridges built in those days could not hold them, this particular one went through a bridge and the owner was killed by the steam and hot water.

From Mrs. Grace Stewart, Pekin, Indiana: I remember going to mill with my father as a small child. We took corn to be made into meal and I fed the ears into the corn sheller while my father furnished the power to turn the mill. We always went to Beck's Mill, south of Salem, Ind., in Washington County.

From Mrs. Hella Rogers, 445 Dorcas, Omaha, Neb.: I remember when my father went to a "turkey shoot" at Thanksgiving time. Being a little short of ammunition he melted my mother's pewter spoons for his gun. He came home with a big wild turkey. It was so large mother cooked it in the wash boiler.

From Mrs. H. E. Christman, Westfield, Nebraska: I remember when I made all my husband's shirts. They were the old fashioned kind that had to be pulled on over the head.

From Mrs. W. H. Taylor, 3141 Summer Street, Kureka, Calif.: I remember when I lived in Kansas the snow was so deep we had to reach down to hang our washing on the clothesline. After clearing in a store from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. for $3.75 a week.

Biggest Problems of Young People Are Unhappy Homes and the Draft

The problems of the nation's youth have concerned the entire country in recent years.

Now, a national survey of 7,037 young people, reports that young people today are most worried about two problems: the draft and the threat of war, and unhappy relationships between fathers and mothers.

The survey, which included such diversified groups as a young ladies' finishing school in Massachusetts and a state reform school in the midwest, listed 23 problems that face today's youth.

Of the replies, 56 per cent listed the draft and unhappy relationships between fathers and mothers as the top problem.

The next seven included:

1. Developing healthy attitude about sex.
2. Being misunderstood by parents.
3. Finding the right job.
4. Use of narcotics.
5. Responsible driving of automobiles.
6. Use of alcohol.
7. Religious uncertainties.

The poll was devised by Miss Elma Phillips, executive secretary of the National Midcentury

Committee for Children and Youth. It was not a scientific sampling, she explained. Nor did they attempt to differentiate between the voter's selection of problems that were important to him and problems that he thought was important to others.

Miss Phillips reports that in her opinion, despite the obvious limitations of the poll, the results merit attention because they are unique. "So far as we know, there has been no similar attempt in recent years to find out which are the most serious problems of the young."

A surprising result of the poll was the low ratings given economic problems. A good home was voted 15th in the list of 23 problems. Good clothing and an automobile and television set were put at the very bottom.

"Since almost one-third of the nation's young people don't have living condition that measure up to the American standard, the low ratings were a surprise," Miss Phillips said.

The overwhelming majority of the replies to the poll came from persons under 21. The total was 6,181.

I guess that I spoke a little out of turn for it does not look so much like spring as it did a week ago. Even though some of our townsmen are back from Florida, we have a rejuvenation of winter. I guess that the weather man has not heard about these people returning.

I hope that all of the good citizens of the town filed their income tax returns for they tell me that it could be made uncomfortable for anyone that didn't if they catch him. Also the government needs the money very badly so they can pay out $96 for red tape and graft so that they can place the remaining $64 where it is needed. The pitiful part of it all is that this idea seems to penetrate down to state levels also.

My PET PEEVE

By W. Scott Boyd

Miss Fannie, our nosy neighbor was over to see me again yesterday. She hasn't been around since the time she claimed I was a wife.

I had a slight throat infection and temperature. The doctor gave me a couple of injections, departed. Then, Miss Fannie arrived. She carried a steaming of chicken broth and an "steamer" poultice which she stated on slapping on my back.

"Now, prop yourself up and feed you your broth," says she. "Madam," says I sternly, "I'm perfectly capable of feeding myself if I liked chicken broth, why don't?"

"But you must keep up strength. You look like you are foot in the grave, and with a nice little wife and two boys. Eat it, I say!"

"You will, too," says she. Grabbed my nose and held "Now open your mouth."

I had to open my mouth to some air. She above a spoon of that broth down my throat, swallowed and moaned. My smothered.

I controlled myself and I mured to the wife. "Has the doctor put up the quarantine sign yet?" "No he hasn't," says the wife. "Quarantine! What quarantine?"

Miss Fannie stammered. "Didn't you know," says I, "I've got chicken-pox?" "Good heavens," screams Fannie, "and I've never had it!" She fled, leaving the chicken broth and one of her best plates.

The wife fluffed up the pillow tucked me in, and drew the blanket. "Have a good sleep," says she, and pats my cheek. "My but you're getting to be an awful liar in old age."

"Just little white ones," says I. "I think I'll understand."

I had a slight throat infection and temperature. The doctor came, gave me a couple of injections, and departed. Then, Miss Fannie arrived. She carried a steaming pot of chicken broth and an even steamier poultice which she insisted on slapping on my hairless chest.

"Now, prop yourself up and I'll feed you your broth," says she. "Madam," says I sternly, "I am perfectly capable of feeding myself. If I liked chicken broth, which I don't."

"But you must keep up your strength. You look like you have one foot in the grave. And you with a nice little wife and two fine boys. Eat it, I say!"

THE STARS

By LYN CONNELLY

POP record hits, according to some music business theorists, frequently come from left field, but never from any place as remote as Japan.

Latest surprise, however, is a Japanese product, written and recorded in that country with an American G.I. vocalist. . . . Title is "Gomen-Nasai" (translation—"Please Forgive Me"), and it's now a hit on both sides of the Pacific.

Several weeks ago a sailor from the U.S.S. Bon Homme Richard mailed a Nippon-Columbia recording, which he had purchased in Tokyo, to a Los Angeles disc jockey. . . . It was played but once and a storm of excitement broke. . . . The station was swamped with phone calls and west coast music business was in a turmoil as the search for writer and recording artist began.

After a week's search by Columbia Records' Paul Weston, the U.S. Army Public Relations Office and the Walt Disney Music Publishing Firm, the song hit team was identified. . . . Composer was Tokyo bandleader Raymond Hattori. . . . Lyricist, ex-Sergeant Benedict Meyers, was located in Chicago where he is now teaching at Roosevelt College, and the vocalist, ex-Corporal Richard Bowers, was found working in a New Jersey factory while awaiting a Civil Service appointment.

Bowers had sung for his own enjoyment for many years and occasionally did camp shows and radio broadcasts in addition to his clerical duties for the army in Tokyo. . . . He was recruited to do the English vocal for a recording of "Gomen-Nasai" . . . The tune became a hit in Japan. . . . Discharged from the army, Bowers returned to New Jersey where he suddenly got word that he had become the sought-after vocalist on a hit record. . . . He now has an American Columbia recording contract, personal manager, and a movie contract—all as a result of his Japanese recording session for which he was paid $50 at the time.

If you haven't caught up with this lovely ballad yet, by all means do so as it is indeed beautiful. Reverse side has "Tokyo Boogie Woogie," American Jive sung in Japanese by an Oriental hepster named Shizuko Kasagi.

BEAR RIVER GRANGE Bear River Grange met at their hall at Newry Corner, March 14. The usual No. 1 on the date was the supper at 6:30.

Worthy Master Holt called the Grange to order at 8 o'clock sharp. This was "Youths' Night" so the chairs were filled as follows: Master, Eva DeRoche; Overseer, Owen Wright; Lecturer, Earl Merrill; Chaplain, Helen Holt; Secretary, Mary Billings; Treasurer, Edward Burnham; Steward, Paul Wright; Gatekeeper, Robert Billings; Pomona, Ruby Eaman; Ceres, Betty Allen; Flora, Shirley Eaman. Worthy Lecturer told of the many things we could do to win points of credit for our Grange. A state report was read on the water supply. It is O. K. The regular officers took the chairs at this time and worked the 3rd and 4th degrees on Horace Morse. Then the Youths resumed the chairs and carried on the meeting. As it was close to the regular Lecturer's (Gwendolin Holt) birthday, also Slater Edna Smith's birthday and the Juvenile Matron's, Peggy Blake's birthday, they were presented gifts and birthday cakes by different ones. Complete surprise to each one it proved.

Our next meeting, March 23, our State Master Lewis Gupill and wife will be our guests and speaker.

A committee consisting of Charles Burnham, Clayton Blake and Ernest Holt was appointed to study the possibilities of fixing a room in the attic for a library—costs etc. The Grange voted to buy lumber of Bro Blake for fixing above mentioned room—also to buy dishes and dish towels. We had five visitors from N. H. Our Juvenile Grange goes to South Paris to work degrees next Saturday. Their first try away from home. Next meeting the "Youths" will put on the 6:30 supper. The program put on by the Youth committee consisted of opening song by all. Guitar and Harmonica music by Billie Fortin. Talk on "My Trip to Brazil" by Clyde Kerr of Stephens High in Rumford. This was a very interesting talk. Reading by Helen Holt. Closing song—Annie Laurie.

Meeting closed in form. A rising vote of thanks was given both the speaker and the Youths. Several members were found absent by illness, but we all hope they are now on the speedy road to recovery.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Here's How Everyone Can Get Into the Picture

A FREQUENT complaint among camera users is that they never get a chance to be in the picture. A glance at their family albums would give the impression that he or she was virtually a stranger, someone who dropped in once or twice a year, but not a part of the family group.

There's really no reason why the family album can't contain a fair share of snapshots including the entire family—and without having a kindly friend or neighbor man the camera for you.

The answer lies in an inexpensive little gadget that fits on your camera—a very simple accessory that enables the person who sets up the camera to be in the picture. It is called an automatic release and this is how it works:

Assemble your group, leaving an easily accessible spot for yourself. Set the camera on a tripod with your picture nicely composed in the view finder. When all is in readiness, you set the release which has a spring type control. Then you don't waste any time taking your place in the group before the camera. You'll have about 10 seconds to make it before the automatic release trips the shutter and takes the picture.

Some of the older cameras, which are not equipped for synchronized flash, have such a timing element built in. However, all the newer models require the accessory automatic timer.

Check with your photographic dealer about the automatic release accessory for your camera—and how to take a picture and be in it too. Some people feel that especially good group pictures are often made this way because the other people are so interested in whether or not the photographer is going to make it into the picture before the shutter is tripped that they forget to be camera conscious.

In any event, it is a trick that is fun to try and it will put you in your own picture.

THE PRIZE BOOB

By Ona F. Lathrop

Bill Bayless was the prize boob of all the neighbors in "The Court." If anybody as much as started a paint job on one of the little white houses that dotted the street like a string of china beads, Bill would come sauntering across, paintbrush in hand, with that look in his eye.

"Hi there, fella. See you got yourself a nice piece of work cut out. Want a little help?" And he'd set to and paint as long as the job held out.

If there was a lawn to grade or a fence to build, Bill would turn up with the proper tools, grinning in his good-natured way, and help until the job was done.

When Janet West wanted to entertain her bridge club in her newly paneled living-room last spring before their sidewalks were in and their front yard a mudhole, here came Bill trundling a wheelbarrow of his own stepping stones that he'd taken up and brought over for Janet's girls to walk in on. You couldn't hate a guy like that, and yet he made the rest of us feel like pikers!

Polly, his wife, complained a little. They had built their own house, moving in before the partitions were in to save rent and they were still "finishing"—only there didn't seem to be any hurry about it—for Bill.

"If only Bill took as much interest in our own place as he does in the rest of yours," Polly would wail. "I've been trying to get him to put up shelves for my canned fruit for two years, and the children's room still isn't painted but he says that makes it nice—they can mark on the walls all they want to and then we'll do it over when they know better!"

The other wives sympathized with Polly, but they all welcomed his help and piled him with coffee and cokes, and you always heard them bragging what a wonderful fellow Bill was, and how possessive Polly was.

But when calamity struck, we opened our eyes. Polly and the children had been gone weeks caring for her sick mother when Bill went home dog-tired from helping Jim Curtis with his porch, and fell asleep with a cigarette in his hand. The next thing The Court knew, the fire department was tearing down the street trying to save the little white house that wasn't finished yet.

Bill didn't even let Polly know, and the next day he started all over again. But this time he wasn't alone. Every one of us had a debt to pay Bill Bayless in one way or another and we were there too. That house got repaired in nothing flat, and we all turned in and painted it inside and out. The girls washed up the curtains and fixed the inside. We put up the shelves for the canned fruit and painted the kids' room in circus colors. We graded up the lawn that Bill had never got around to doing, and each of us contributed some planting or perennial where the firemen had trampled theirs out. Bob West even took up the stepping stones and came trundling them back to set in place the night before Polly came home.

When Polly walked in and saw things shining and heard what had happened, she broke down and wept on Bill's shoulder. We all stood around grinning proudly as if we'd originated the "help one another" theory, until Polly said, "I know I don't rate all this, but I realize you did it for Bill, and he certainly deserves it. If ever a man was a big-hearted boob, it's Bill, and I'll never complain again when he goes off to help the rest of you."

We murmured silly things sheepishly about neighbors always standing ready to help, and that's what felons were for. But the look on Bill's face was enough to repay us a hundred times over for the little we had done. Now there's a guy that The Court is proud to have living in it, even if he is one prize boob!
